Reports Say British Have Taken Over Interior Censorship In Area

DE GAULLE MAKES CHARGE

Resentment Among French Aroused By New Reports And Accusations

LONDON, June 4—French government sources in Paris said today that the British apparently are trying to seize complete control of the Levant and already have taken over interior censorship and probably outgoing cables.

High quarters in Paris increased the resentment aroused among the French by Prime Minister Churchill's intervention in the Levant crisis. Gen. Charles de Gaulle already has accused the British of stirring up the trouble.

Beyrouth reports said British troops, marines and sailors were moving French soldiers and civilians from all populated areas in Syria to isolated camps to prevent further bloodshed.

In Paris, informed government quarters said French functionaries and their families and pro-French elements among the natives still were suffering from sporadic attacks by irregular elements of the gendarmerie.

Government circles were openly resentful at reports that Syrian gendarmes had been ordered to maintain order. They said these were the same gendarmes who first attacked French posts in the Levant, which by the French version of the affair touched off the whole crisis.

Foreign office sources in Paris said that despite the Levantine troubles, the government was seeking to renew negotiations with Britain in hope of getting the release of some Iraq oil, described as one-quarter by French interests.

Since the start of the war, France's portion of the Iraq oil has been handled by the British, since it could not be transported through the Mediterranean to France. Now France wants her portion, estimated by the foreign office sources at around 80,000 tons a month, shipped direct to France.

In London, Prime Minister Churchill was expected to reply in commons to Gen. Charles de Gaulle's charge of last Saturday that British agents were responsible for the uprising in the Levant.

A joint statement in Cairo by the prime minister of Lebanon and president of the Syrian chamber of deputies accused the French of using lend-lease weapons in the Levant disorders. De Gaulle Saturday denied that such

Reds Carry Out Threat Of Execution

50 Nazis Reported Killed After Minor Uprising In Berlin

LONDON, June 4—The Russians were reported today to have made good their threats and put to death 50 Nazi hostages after a minor uprising in Berlin.

The Finnish radio reported that the Red Army executed 50 Nazis after fighting flared in several districts of Berlin three days ago. The report said the Russians also caught and shot several Germans responsible for the outbreak.

Dr. Arthur Werner, Russian-appointed mayor of Berlin, had warned Berliners that 50 Germans would be put to death for every act of violence against the Russians. His warning apparently was broadcast the same day that fighting broke out in Berlin.

The Allied control commission probably will discuss the problem of how to deal with Germans who attack occupation troops at its meeting this week. Observers pointed out that the Russians apparently already had decided what measures they would use, while there was no indication what the western allies would do.

An Exchange Telegraph correspondent with the British Second army reported that 500 Hungarian troops who were guards during the reign of the "beast of Belsen" and who were said to have taken part in atrocities were still armed. It was said officially the Hungarians were not disarmed because there had not been any directive issued for it. Many of the 18,000 prisoners still at the camp, who are supposed to have been liberated, protested about their former torturers being still armed.

The Daily Mail meanwhile reported from Wiesbaden that a Nazi plan for another "Der Tag" five years from now had been uncovered. The Mail dispatch said the plan was formed by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, Deputy Fuehrer Martin Bormann, Labor Leader Robert Ley, and other high Nazis at a meeting under the chairmanship of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler.

According to the plan, four Nazi leaders were to arise like messiahs

TRIAL OF SUIT AGAINST WATER COMPANY OPENS

Jurors were being selected Monday in common pleas court to hear the appropriation suit of the City of Circleville against the Ohio Water Service company. Judge Earl Parker, Pike county common pleas court judge, will hear the case.

The suit against the Ohio Water Service company was filed after a referendum vote on a city ordinance providing for the condemnation of the water company property. The special election was held December 5, 1944. The city's voters approved the city ordinance by a vote of 1,020 for the ordinance as against 612 against the ordinance.

The city council passed the ordinance after negotiations for the purchase of the water company plant and equipment broke down. Prior to the breaking down of the negotiations the city council had offered the water company $450,000.

The ordinance which Circleville voters approved in December instructed the city solicitor to prepare the appropriation or condemnation petition and file it in a court of record.

The appropriation ordinance was passed by city council August 15, 1944 and would have become effective September 15. The water company forced a general vote on the ordinance by circulating petitions. The petitions were filed with Mayor Ben H. Gordon September 12 and 13. Fourteen hundred persons signed the petitions.

The purpose of the suit is to have the jury set a price on the water company property in Circleville.

37TH PUSHES AHEAD ON LUZON

Jap Resistance Light On Island; Nip Casualties Now Total 385,480

MANILA, June 4—The 37th division drove along the Cagayan valley in northern Luzon today against light resistance amid indications the retreating Japanese had taken to horseback.

In an advance to four miles north of Santa Fe on Saturday, units from the 37th captured large quantities of abandoned enemy equipment, including cavalry gear. This was the first indication the Japanese were using cavalry in the Pacific island fighting, although they have used horses and mules for pack work in the past.

The 37th ran into some anti-tank fire as it advanced along the 120-mile long valley, but there was no stout resistance from the Japanese. Seventy-five enemy bodies were counted.

Today's communique reported that Japanese casualties in the Philippines have reached 385,480. During the past week, 6,550 dead

TITO DECLARES SLAVS TO FIGHT FOR CARINTHIA

LONDON, June 4—In a belligerent statement to his countrymen, Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia said today, "Carinthia is ours and we will fight for her."

Radio Belgrade, heard by the BBC, said Tito promised to fight for the Austrian province in a speech to a welcoming committee on his arrival at Celje in Slovenia. "Yugoslavia is free," Tito said. "We have liberated Trieste, Istria, and Carinthia. We have liberated Carinthia, but international circumstances were such that we have been obliged to withdraw temporarily. Carinthia is ours and we will fight for her."

The dispute over Carinthia also was highlighted by a Belgrade dispatch from Tass, the Soviet news agency, quoting a resident of the province as saying the people were in tears when the Yugoslav army left and the British entered.

Boyd Stout Named State Jaycee Vice President; Local Group Wins Awards

Boyd Stout Monday held the first state office to which a member of the Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce had ever been elected. Stout, president of the local Jaycee organization, was named state vice president at the weekend convention of the Ohio organization.

Stout had been a candidate for state president but his supporters agreed to accept the nomination for vice president and give their support to another candidate for president. Stout received the second highest number of votes for vice president.

The local group also received several prizes in the state scrapbook contest. In the group of cities under 30,000 the Circleville Jaycees won two firsts, a second and honorable mention. First prizes were won for city beautification and Americanism and governmental affairs. The second award came in the profit-making projects class. Honorable mention was received for the youth welfare program.

Twelve members of the local organization attended the meeting. Charles B. Hazlett, president of the Akron Junior Chamber of Commerce, was elected president of the Ohio Junior Chamber. He succeeds Ron Ansley, Columbus.

Other officers named besides Stout were: Tod Bechtel, Columbus; Frederick E. Bickel, Warren; J. Knight Goodman, Middletown; Robert Schmidt, Ashland; vice presidents; Marvin Adams, Galion; and Walter McCaleb, Cleveland, national directors.

The state organization adopted a resolution pledging its "continued support in the prosecution of a successful termination of the war."

CRISIS ON VETO PROBLEM EASES

Big Five Agree On 14 Of 17 Disputed Issues At San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4—The United States, Britain, France and China today abandoned any idea of resorting to an immediate showdown vote on Russia's proposal to let a big power veto discussion of disputes by the security council of the new peace organization.

They waited instead for Moscow's reaction to their vigorously stated opposition to the Russian interpretation of the Yalta voting formula and hoped it would reveal Soviet willingness to solve the issue by negotiation.

That change of attitude plus big five agreement on 14 out of 17 major controversial issues eased the weekend apprehension which was caused by the unexpected Russian interpretation of the voting formula. Until late yesterday, some U. S. delegates feared the issue would have to be tossed into the laps of all the 49 nations to decide—with a two-thirds majority certain against Russia.

The decision to await new word from Moscow in no way changed American determination not to compromise on this issue. It will continue to oppose the use of the veto by a permanent member of the security council to prevent discussion of a dispute.

27,000 PACIFIC VETERANS TO GO HOME IN JUNE

MANILA, June 4—Twenty thousand Army veterans of the Southwest Pacific war and another 7,000 drawn from the central Pacific areas will be on their way home for discharge under the point system by the end of June, it was announced today.

The southwest Pacific quota includes 1,334 officers and 18,666 enlisted men, but there will be no WACs among the homeward bound veterans this month.

The Army's system of rotation leaves also will be terminated with the return of the June quota and Pacific personnel thereafter will get home by the point discharge route.

It also was announced that the U. S. Army forces in the far eastern theater will release all men over 42 years of age who request discharges.

Soldiers between 40 and 42 also will be eligible for discharge upon request, although they may be retained by their units for a maximum of 90 days after their release applications are filed.

New York Greet Gen. Omar Bradley And 11,000 European War Heroes

NEW YORK, June 4—Today was hero day in New York.

For almost 11,000 GI's and 10 of the generals who led them to victory in Europe, it was H-for-Home—coming day plus one.

The generals arrived by plane and the troops by ships which docked after a near-disastrous convoy collision in a fog 1,200 miles off shore.

Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, soft-spoken Missourian who led the 12th army group, arrived by transport plane. Gen. Carl (Toogy) Spaatz, head of U. S. strategic air ies, recalled his tour of duty in Hawaii from 1924 to 1927 and said:

"The only opinion I ever formed of the Japanese is that I would not trust them anywhere."

Spatz praised U. S. airpower in Europe and said "I have just been over a good deal of Germany. I can tell you that Germany has been destroyed."

Mrs. Bradley and Mrs. Spaatz were at La Guardia field when their husbands arrived. In Bradley's plane were Maj. Gen. Leland

Government Spending To Taper Off

U. S. In Sight Of Slowing Down Biggest Spending Spree In History

WASHINGTON, June 4—Believe it or not, the United States government today was within sight of beginning to taper off the biggest spending spree in history.

War spending in May still was the second highest on record—exceeding $8,000,000,000. But the outlook is better with the change to a one-front war.

This is the last month of the 1945 fiscal year. By July 1 the government will have spent nearly $100,000,000,000 in 12 months. It will have gone more than $50,000,000,000 further into the red in the same period.

When the new fiscal year begins at midnight next June 30 the national debt will be so big as to be almost incomprehensible. The figure will be approximately $240,000,000,000.

Billions Borrowed

If you subtract a matter of $16,000,000,000 or so from the national debt figure you will have the sum of money which the government has had to borrow in the past 14 years. That would represent the extent to which the government has lived beyond its means since the first depression deficit in the latter part of Herbert Hoover's administration. The $16,000,000,000 was a holdover debt from World War I.

When the late Franklin D. Roosevelt took over in 1933 he announced an economy program which lasted less than four months. During his first few years in office Mr. Roosevelt talked confidently of balancing the budget—but always scheduled that painful operation for some future time. His administration operated on a deficit from March 4, 1933, when he took office until April 12, 1945, when he died in his fourth term.

Truman Faces Job

President Harry S. Truman has the job of trying to get the treasury out of the red. He began in his first month as president with a request for a cut of approximately $4,000,000,000 in projected merchant shipbuilding expenditures. Congress was enthusiastic and has actually enacted legislation making the reduction effective.

Apartment from Mr. Truman's recommendation to prevent the expenditure of funds already appropriated, Congress is undertaking to reduce sums proposed for approval.

ASSEMBLY HEADS FOR SHOWDOWN ON SCHOOL BILL

COLUMBUS, June 4—The Ohio general assembly apparently was headed for a showdown battle today on the question of how much money schools and local governments shall receive from the state during the next two years.

These two important problems were among nearly a dozen confronting members of the assembly as they returned from the Memorial Day holiday for their sixth and—they hoped—last month of work this session.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche still was mum officially on whether or not he would veto the Daniels-Cramer school bill which was expected to reach his desk this week. His repeated criticisms of increased state spending left little doubt that he would.

The bill, which would give the state's 1,622 school districts about $6,500,000 more than the $104,220,000 recommended by the governor was passed by the house last week by a vote of 105-20 with 26 Democrats joining 79 Republicans in supporting the measure.

If Lausche saw that he would be unable to obtain the three-fifths majority necessary to uphold a veto, however, he might let the bill become law without his signature.

This would permit him to stand by his guns and place the blame for increased state spending squarely on the Republican majority.

Okinawa Campaign Rapidly Drawing To Close; Nip Forces Sealed Off

PLAN BALLOON ATTACK

Tokyo Says Bomb Carrying Balloons Will Be Sent Into United States

By United Press

With the Okinawa campaign rapidly nearing an end, Japan converted her entire naval air force into a suicide corps to protect the homeland from the rampaging American fleet today.

Other developments in the Pacific war included:

1. Radio Tokyo said Japan intends to attack the United States with piloted, bomb-carrying balloons in the "near future."

2. American troops fanned out along the south coast of Okinawa after sealing off thousands of the enemy on the Chinen peninsula. Tokyo quoted an unconfirmed report that American units had landed behind Japanese positions on Chinen peninsula from the sea.

3. The American 37th division drove along Luzon's Cagayan valley against light resistance. Japanese casualties in the Philippines reached 385,480.

4. Units of the American 1st task force were revealed to be operating in China after helping to reopen the Burma road.

5. Chinese troops re-captured Chienkiang, 90 miles northeast of Nanning, and pursued the Japanese toward Liuchow.

6. British troops seized two towns on the east coast of Burma.

7. Radio Tokyo admitted that American and Allied spies were becoming increasingly active in Japan.

A Japanese spokesman said the present attacks on the United States with pilotless balloons were only the forerunner of larger-scale raids "with death-dealing Japanese airmen manning the balloons."

The spokesman complained that the United States had not divulged the extent of damage caused by pilotless balloons, but surmised they were "creating havoc." He said hundreds of this type were being launched daily.

Another Tokyo broadcast said every Japanese naval plane will be ordered to crash itself against an Allied warship in a suicide attack.

"If this tactic is successful," the broadcast said, "victory is assured for Japan. If otherwise, the navy will have many heroes for our shrines."

The broadcast followed one last week in which Tokyo said all branches of the navy would be trained in suicide tactics.

Halsey Welcomes Plan

Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey, whose Third fleet sent carrier planes against suicide-plane bases in southern Japan Saturday and Sunday, welcomed the enemy announcement of suicide attacks.

Halsey challenged the Japanese to send remnants of their fleet in a do-or-die "banzai" attack against him.

"I wish the B-----s would," he told newsmen aboard his flagship off Okinawa. "They might get their thumbs half-way to their nose—but that's all."

FURTHER CUT IN CIVILIAN SUGAR SUPPLY FORECAST

BOSTON, June 4—A further cut in civilian sugar allotments was forecast by the united business service today.

According to present indications, UBS said, supplies of sugar may not be large enough even to meet the already reduced third-quarter allotments and industrial consumers faced further severe reductions.

Government reports, it was said, contend that 1,221,000 tons was needed this year for the armed forces and export as compared with 970,000 tons last year.

TRIAL OF SUIT AGAINST WATER COMPANY OPENS

Jurors were being selected Monday in common pleas court to hear the appropriation suit of the City of Circleville against the Ohio Water Service company. Judge Earl Parker, Pike county common pleas court judge, will hear the case.

The suit against the Ohio Water Service company was filed after a referendum vote on a city ordinance providing for the condemnation of the water company property. The special election was held December 5, 1944. The city's voters approved the city ordinance by a vote of 1,020 for the ordinance as against 612 against the ordinance.

The city council passed the ordinance after negotiations for the purchase of the water company plant and equipment broke down. Prior to the breaking down of the negotiations the city council had offered the water company $450,000.

The ordinance which Circleville voters approved in December instructed the city solicitor to prepare the appropriation or condemnation petition and file it in a court of record.

The appropriation ordinance was passed by city council August 15, 1944 and would have become effective September 15. The water company forced a general vote on the ordinance by circulating petitions. The petitions were filed with Mayor Ben H. Gordon September 12 and 13. Fourteen hundred persons signed the petitions.

The purpose of the suit is to have the jury set a price on the water company property in Circleville.

These two important problems were among nearly a dozen confronting members of the assembly as they returned from the Memorial Day holiday for their sixth and—they hoped—last month of work this session.

Gov. Frank J. Lausche still was mulling officially on whether or not he would veto the Daniels-Cramer school bill which was expected to reach his desk this week. His repeated criticisms of increased state spending left little doubt that he would.

The bill, which would give the state's 1,622 school districts about $6,500,000 more than the $104,220,000 recommended by the governor was passed by the house last week by a vote of 105-20 with 26 Democrats joining 79 Republicans in supporting the measure.

If Lausche saw that he would be unable to obtain the three-fifths majority necessary to uphold a veto, however, he might let the bill become law without his signature.

This would permit him to stand by his guns and place the blame for increased state spending squarely on the Republican majority. (Continued on Page Two)

Tokyo Says Bomb Carrying Balloons Will Be Sent Into United States

By United Press

With the Okinawa campaign rapidly nearing an end, Japan converted her entire naval air force into a suicide corps to protect the homeland from the rampaging American fleet today.

Other developments in the Pacific war included:

1. Radio Tokyo said Japan intends to attack the United States with piloted, bomb-carrying balloons in the "near future."

2. American troops fanned out along the south coast of Okinawa after sealing off thousands of the enemy on the Chinen peninsula. Tokyo quoted an unconfirmed report that American units had landed behind Japanese positions on Chinen peninsula from the sea.

3. The American 37th division drove along Luzon's Cagayan valley against light resistance. Japanese casualties in the Philippines reached 385,480.

4. Units of the American 1st task force were revealed to be operating in China after helping to reopen the Burma road.

5. Chinese troops re-captured Chienkiang, 90 miles northeast of Nanning, and pursued the Japanese toward Luichow.

6. British troops seized two towns on the east coast of Burma.

7. Radio Tokyo admitted that American and Allied spies were becoming increasingly active in Japan.

A Japanese spokesman said the present attacks on the United States with pilotless balloons were only the forerunner of larger-scale raids "with death-defying Japanese airmen manning the balloons."

The spokesman complained that the United States had not divulged the extent of damage caused by pilotless balloons, but surmised they were "creating havoc." He said hundreds of this type were being launched daily.

Another Tokyo broadcast said every Japanese naval plane will be ordered to crash itself against an Allied warship in a suicide attack.

If this tactic is successful," the broadcast said, "victory is assured for Japan. If otherwise, the navy will have many heroes for our shrines."

The broadcast followed one last week in which Tokyo said all branches of the navy would be trained in suicide tactics.

Halsey Welcomes Plan

Admiral William F. (Bull) Halsey, whose Third fleet sent carrier planes against suicide-plane bases in southern Japan Saturday and Sunday, welcomed the enemy announcement of suicide attacks.

Halsey challenged the Japanese to send remnants of their fleet in a do-or-die "banzai" attack against him.

"I wish the B-----s would," he told newsmen aboard his flagship off Okinawa. "They might get their thumbs half-way to their nose—but that's all."

FURTHER CUT IN CIVILIAN SUGAR SUPPLY FORECAST

BOSTON, June 4—A further cut in civilian sugar allotments was forecast by the united business service today.

According to present indications, UBS said, supplies of sugar may not be large enough even to meet the already reduced third-quarter allotments and industrial consumers faced further severe reductions.

Government reports, it was said, contend that 1,221,000 tons will be needed this year for the armed forces and export as compared with 970,000 tons last year.

A GI'S THOUGHTS BETWEEN V-E AND V-J DAY

Yank's Desire: To Finish Job—Quickly, Thoroughly—Then Go Home

By CPL. ALVIN L. KRIEG
Written for Central Press and This Newspaper

AACHEN, Germany—G I Joe is a plain, ordinary guy who thinks and talks and feels pretty much the way he's always thought and talked—and felt—except that there's a lot of miles between him and the places and people he loves. As a consequence, he's hungry for home. And that fact enters into all his thinking.

Don't ever let anyone tell you, though, that any time during the loneliness or the discomfort or the danger he's experienced has the soldier reached the point that he is so anxious to get home he has forgotten the job at hand.

That was a particularly nasty story that went the rounds a few times—that the vast majority of soldiers would have cheerfully endorsed the idea of a negotiated peace, with concessions for the Nazis, just so they could go home sooner.

Beat Them First

(Plenty of them beamed, though, at what they considered premature ballyhoo about unconditional surrender and the tough terms that would be imposed on Germany. Their idea was—beat them first, then throw the book at them. They felt that talk would prolong Nazi resistance.)

There's a deep-seated hatred for the Nazis among soldiers. Part of it is due to the brutality they have seen, or the part of the ex-superman. That is particularly true, of course, among the men who've had a long siege on the line.

Good sportsmanship is part of the American code—and a Yank does not like a fellow who does not play fair. And that feeling is magnified a million times in combat.

That reference to sportsmanship does not mean the Yank considers war any kind of a game—and the contention that he does is a lot of eyewash. He knows war for a dirty, ugly, brutal business.

There is a feeling that is shared by the men on the front line and the men who drive the trucks and cook the meals and type the orders and unload the boats—they hate the Nazis for the very elementary reason that they are away from home because of the Nazis. And they are unanimous in wanting to get the job done, with complete and shattering finality, so that they can go home and not have to come back—or send their sons back.

What better motive could there be for wanting to finish a job than to be able to go home?

Of course, it goes deeper than that. The G I does not talk about it in a high-sounding way, but actually he is fighting to keep his home exactly the way he left it—to make sure that war does not come close to it.

Not long ago at a battalion dispensary, I saw a couple of medics carry in a Dutch woman, a victim of a German land mine. She was badly mutilated, and her face was a mass of black powder burns. A group of soldiers was there, waiting for medical attention for one reason or another. One of the group, a lad about 21, gulped a little and put into words what the others were thinking:

"Thank God I don't have to be afraid of that happening to my mother."

Too, I remember in a certain Belgian town, when the buzz bombs were coming over regularly. Every time that queer throbbing noise came through the air, the kids would run for the cellars—just as their parents did. And the Yankee soldiers who watched those kids would say something like this: "Boy, I don't know what I'd do if kids at home had to go through all this!"

It does not matter whether they carried those remarks through to any logical conclusion—that they were personally doing what they could to make sure their families would never fear those things. But spoken, or unspoken, it's all wrapped up in what the soldier is thinking about home.

I tried to tell the story of what G I Joe is thinking about in this little verse that appeared in Yank magazine—based on "745," the Army's official name for a rifleman:

On civilian days
I meditate—
Where 745
Means a quarter to eight.
Another soldier told the story better with a verse in the Stars and Stripes, soldiers' newspaper.

The guys who want to be a hero
Are practically zero.
Those who want to be civilians
Can be counted in the millions.

For it is still a civilian army—and by this time, the AXIS is the best judge whether a civilian soldier is a good fighting man.

Getting back to what this civilian soldier is thinking about. He does not give a continental, incidentally, whether you call him G I Joe. He does not waste the time thinking about it. He is more concerned with thinking about what it will be like when he steps off the gangplank on the other side.

It would be silly to say that every soldier is doing a great deal of thinking about what the post-war world will offer him in the way of economic opportunity.

They're Making Plans
It would be just as silly to say that every soldier is indifferent to the issues of the war and the problems that will confront him and his country when it's over.

In no group, civilian or military, will you ever find everyone planning his future with the same degree of care and thought as the next person.

By and large, though, the soldier has some pretty definite ideas about his own plans. He is familiar with the G I Bill of Rights.

But whether or not he knows the details, he is fully conscious of the fact that he is assured far more in the way of benefits—mustering-out pay, educational and financial assistance in getting started again, and all the rest—than ever before has been offered to returning servicemen.

Right now he is more concerned with details of the demobilization plan. For many months soldiers in the ETO have been tossing back and forth the one big question—will I go home when it's over on this side, or will I go direct to the Pacific?

And though I haven't been there yet, I'll venture that the big topic among G I's in the Pacific is this—what effect will the wind-up in Europe have on me getting home?

S. Hobbs, commander of the 30th division, Lt. Col. Harry W. Weeste, Maj. Chester B. Hansen and Capt. Robert F. Braun.

Also in Bradley's party were Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, commander of the 101st airborne division, Maj. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, commander of the 103rd division who was acting head of the 101st at Bastogne when he delivered his famous reply—"nuts!" to a German surrender ultimatum, Maj. Gen. Paul I. Williams, of the troop carrier command and Brig. Gen. John Paul Doyle, commander of the 1st tactical airforce, 42nd wing.

Bradley was at West Point today. Tomorrow he will address the military academy's graduating class and join fellow officers of the class of 1915 in their 30th reunion. "Eisenhower couldn't make it," Bradley said.

Saturday, Bradley's home town of Moberly, Mo., will turn out the town band, bunting and the red carpet for his real homecoming.

Seven troop ships made port in harbor fog and rain. Aboard the U. S. S. Monticello were 1,453 1st army veterans, virtually the entire headquarters staff of Gen. Courtney H. Hodges. They are expected to form the nucleus for a new army to be sent to the Pacific. Other returning troops were from the 45th, 36th and 55th divisions and first Ranger division.

As the Monticello approached her pier, the crew ran up the "church pennant." It was a flying prayer of thanks from the men who had been first on Normandy's shores, first across the Rhine and first home for redeployment to Japan.

Waiting at the Staten Island pier for the Monticello were the 1st Army's "palace guard" of 30 officers who had been flown home from central Germany last May 21 to plan the 1st army's role in the Japanese war.

The Monticello carried 3,339 liberated prisoners of war and 409 wounded. Nearly 850 Navy men, returning for new assignments, were aboard.

One of the Liberty ships, the John B. Hood, brought 1,500 veterans and gaping evidence of trouble on the Atlantic crossing. The vessel had a 10-foot hole in her bow from collision with other ships of a 96-ship convoy off Newfoundland. In heavy fog, two ships rammed icebergs and 14 others behind them bumped together. Officers said there were no injuries to crews or passengers. Some of the ships put in at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Wounded were taken to Halloran general hospital, Staten Island, while other GI's entrained for Camp Kilmer, N. J., and the traditional steak dinner reception. T/Sgt. Bazin Bruce, of Haverhill, Mass., a 1st army veteran with 114 service points, reached for doughnuts when he left the Monticello.

"I can't see," he said. "I've got tears in my eyes."

SENATOR FAVORS HORSE TRADING WITH RUSSIANS

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, D., Colo., urged today that the United States adopt a policy of "horse-trading" with Russia as the best means of avoiding a war "which might last 100 years and would certainly destroy our civilization completely."

"When they bang on the table and say they've got to have something, the thing for us to do is bang right back and see if he can't work out a trade with them," the Westerner said in an interview.

Johnson assailed the "policy of appeasement and supine surrender" which he said the state department was following toward the Soviet Union and emphasized the "desperate necessity" for getting along with the Russians.

The department "apparently hasn't got the slightest idea how to deal with Russia," he declared. "There isn't a reason in the world why we should ever fight the Russians. We've got to work out a policy of friendship which will prevent it, for if it came it might last 100 years and would certainly destroy our civilization completely."

damaged at least 30 enemy aircraft in raids on Kyushu, southernmost of the enemy's home islands, Saturday and accounted for nine more yesterday.

The end of the campaign in Okinawa appeared only a matter of days away. The Americans ripped the enemy's best remaining defenses and split his garrison with a 3,000-yard advance to the south coast yesterday.

The seventh division reached the southern beaches with a drive down the east coast that cut across the base of Chinen peninsula. Other units slashed southward at the center of the line against weakening opposition.

Naha Units Stubborn

Only in the Naha airfield area of the west coast and around the south shore of adjacent Naha harbor did the enemy show any signs of holding his positions. There the final battles may be fought.

Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U. S. forces in China, announced that the 475th infantry regiment and the 124th cavalry regiment were flown to China from Burma several weeks ago. Their mission was not disclosed.

A GI'S THOUGHTS BETWEEN V-E AND V-J DAY

Yank's Desire: To Finish Job—Quickly, Thoroughly—Then Go Home

By CPL. ALVIN L. KRIEG
Written for Central Press and This Newspaper

AACHEN, Germany—G I Joe is a plain, ordinary guy who thinks and talks and feels pretty much the way he's always thought and talked and felt—except that there's a lot of miles between him and the places and people he loves. As a consequence, he's hungry for home. And that fact enters into all his thinking.

Don't ever let anyone tell you, though, that any time during the loneliness or the discomfort or the danger he's experienced has the soldier reached the point that he is so anxious to get home he has forgotten the job at hand.

That was a particularly nasty story that went the rounds a few times—that the vast majority of soldiers would have cheerfully endorsed the idea of a negotiated peace, with concessions for the Nazis, just so they could go home sooner.

Beat Them First
(Plenty of them beamed, though, at what they considered premature ballyhoo about unconditional surrender and the tough terms that would be imposed on Germany. Their idea was—beat them first, then throw the book at them. They felt that would prolong Nazi resistance.)

There's a deep-seated hatred for the Nazis among soldiers. Part of it is due to the brutality they have seen, or their buddies have seen, on the part of the ex-supernumeraries. That is particularly true, of course, among the men who've had a long siege on the line.

Good sportsmanship is part of the American code—and a Yank does not like a fellow who does not play fair. And that feeling is magnified a million times in combat.

That reference to sportsmanship does not mean the Yank considers war any kind of a game—and the contention that he does is a lot of eyewash. He knows war for a dirty, ugly, brutal business.

There is a feeling that is shared by the men on the front line and the men who drive the trucks and cook the meals and type the orders and unload the boats—they hate the Nazis for the very elementary reason that they are away from home because of the Nazis. And they are unanimous in wanting to get the job done, with complete and shattering finality, so that they can go home and not have to come back—or send their sons back.

What better motive could there be for wanting to finish a job—than to be able to go home?

Of course, it goes deeper than that. The G I does not talk about it in a high-sounding way, but actually he is fighting to keep his home exactly the way he left it—to make sure that war does not come close to it.

Not long ago at a battalion dispensary, I saw a couple of medics carry in a Dutch woman, a victim of a German land mine. She was badly mutilated, and her face was a mass of black powder burns. A group of soldiers was there, waiting for medical attention for one reason or another. One of the group, a lad about 21, gulped a little and put into words what the others were thinking:

"Thank God I don't have to be afraid of that happening to my mother."

Too, I remember in a certain Belgian town, when the buzz bombs were coming over regularly. Every time that queer throbbing noise came through the air, the kids would run for the cellars—just as their parents did. And the Yankee soldiers who watched those kids would say something like this: "Boy, I don't know what I'd do if kids at home had to go through all this!"

It does not matter whether they carried those remarks through to any logical conclusion—that they were personally doing what they could to make sure their families would never fear those things. But spoken, or unspoken, it's all wrapped up in what the soldier is thinking about home.

I tried to tell the story of what G I Joe is thinking about in this little verse that appeared in Yank magazine—based on "745," the Army's official name for a rifleman:

On civilian days
meditate—
Where 745

Means a quarter to eight.

Another soldier told the story better with a verse in the Stars and Stripes, soldiers' newspaper. The guys who want to be a hero are practically zero.

Those who want to be civilians can be counted in the millions.

For it is still a civilian army—and by this time, the Axis is the best judge whether a civilian soldier is a good fighting man.

Getting back to what this civilian soldier is thinking about. He does not give a continental, incidentally, whether you call him G I Joe. He does not waste the time thinking about it. He is more concerned with thinking about what it will be like when he steps off the gangplank on the other side.

It would be silly to say that every soldier is doing a great deal of thinking about what the post-war world will offer him in the way of economic opportunity.

They're Making Plans

It would be just as silly to say that every soldier is indifferent to the issues of the war and the problems that will confront him and his country when it's over.

In no group, civilian or military, will you ever find everyone planning his future with the same degree of care and thought as the next person.

By and large, though, the soldier has some pretty definite ideas about his own plans. He is familiar with the G I Bill of Rights.

But whether or not he knows the details, he is fully conscious of the fact that he is assured far more in the way of benefits—mustering-out pay, educational and financial assistance in getting started again, and all the rest—than ever before has been offered to returning servicemen.

Right now he is more concerned with details of the demobilization plan. For many months soldiers in the ETO have been tossing back and forth the one big question—will I go home when it's over on this side, or will I go direct to the Pacific?

And though I haven't been there yet, I'll venture that the big topic among G I's in the Pacific is this—what effect will the wind-up in Europe have on me getting home?

S. Hobbs, commander of the 30th division, Lt. Col. Harry W. Weaste, Maj. Chester B. Hansen and Capt. Robert F. Braun.

Also in Bradley's party were Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, commander of the 101st airborne division who was acting head of the 101st at Bastogne when he delivered his famous reply—"nuts!" to a German surrender ultimatum, Maj. Gen. Paul I. Williams, of the troop carrier command and Brig. Gen. John Paul Doyle, commander of the 1st tactical airforce, 42nd wing.

Bradley will address the military academy's graduating class and join fellow officers of the class of 1915 in their 30th reunion. "Eisenhower couldn't make it," Bradley said.

Saturday, Bradley's home town of Moberly, Mo., will turn out the town band, bunting and the red carpet for his real homecoming.

Seven troop ships made port in harbor fog and rain. Aboard the U. S. S. Monticello were 1,453 1st army veterans, virtually the entire headquarters staff of Gen. Courtney H. Hodges. They are expected to form the nucleus for a new army to be sent to the Pacific. Other returning troops were from the 45th, 36th and 55th divisions and first Ranger division.

As the Monticello approached her pier, the crew ran up the "church pennant." It was a flying prayer of thanks from the men, who had been first on Normandy's shores, first across the Rhine and first home for redeployment to Japan.

Waiting at the Staten Island pier for the Monticello were the 1st Army's "palace guard" of 30 officers who had been flown home from central Germany last May 21 to plan the 1st army's role in the Japanese war.

The Monticello carried 3,339 liberated prisoners of war and 409 wounded. Nearly 850 Navy men, returning for new assignments, were aboard.

One of the Liberty ships, the John B. Hood, brought 1,500 veterans and gaping evidence of trouble on the Atlantic crossing. The vessel had a 10-foot hole in her bow from collision with other ships of a 96-ship convoy off Newfoundland. In heavy fog, two ships rammed icebergs and 14 others behind them bumped together. Officers said there were no injuries to crews or passengers. Some of the ships put in at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Wounded were taken to Halloran general hospital, Staten Island, while other G I's entrained for Camp Kilmer, N. J., and the traditional steak dinner reception. T/Sgt. Bazin Bruce, of Haverhill, Mass., a 1st army veteran with 114 service points, reached for doughnuts when he left the Monticello.

"I can't see," he said. "I've got tears in my eyes."

SENATOR FAVORS HORSE TRADING WITH RUSSIANS

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Sen. Edwin C. Johnson, D., Colo., urged today that the United States adopt a policy of "horse-trading" with Russia as the best means of avoiding a war "which might last 100 years and would certainly destroy our civilization completely."

"When they bang on the table and say they've got to have something, the thing for us to do is bang right back and see if he can't work out a trade with them," the Westerner said in an interview.

Johnson assailed the "policy of appeasement and supine surrender" which he said the state department was following toward the Soviet Union and emphasized the "desperate necessity" for getting along with the Russians.

The department "apparently hasn't got the slightest idea how to deal with Russia," he declared. "There isn't a reason in the world why we should ever fight the Russians. We've got to work out a policy of friendship which will prevent it, for if it came it might last 100 years and would certainly destroy our civilization completely."

damaged at least 36 enemy aircraft in raids on Kyushu, southernmost of the enemy's home islands, Saturday and accounted for nine more yesterday.

The end of the campaign in Okinawa appeared only a matter of days away. The Americans ripped the enemy's best remaining defenses and split his garrison with a 3,000-yard advance to the south coast yesterday.

The seventh division reached the southern beaches with a drive down the east coast that cut across the base of Chinen peninsula. Other units slashed southward at the center of the line against weakening opposition.

Naha Units Stubborn
Only in the Naha airfield area of the west coast and around the south shore of adjacent Naha harbor did the enemy show any signs of holding his positions. There the final battles may be fought.

Lt. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U. S. forces in China, announced that the 475th infantry regiment and the 124th cavalry regiment were flown to China from Burma several weeks ago. Their mission was not disclosed.

were counted and 503 prisoners taken. American and Filipino casualties were 225 killed and 657 wounded.

On Mindanao island, deep wedges were driven into enemy defenses in the hills west of Davao city. The air force hammered the Japanese positions, and also harried their escape routes on the southern coast, where four barges and a motor launch were sunk.

On Tarakan, off Borneo, Dutch and Australian forces were reducing the last Japanese positions on the island, in the central hills.

Borneo itself got one of its heaviest blows yet when medium, heavy, and fighter planes teamed to drop 190 tons of explosives on airstrips, bivouac areas, and defense positions.

Radio Tokyo reported that Liberators bombed for the first time hit Poniak, on the western side of Borneo.

The Philippines-based heavies also struck another powerful blow at Formosa, their favorite target. The heavies dropped 275 tons of bombs on military installations at Takao, starting fires that sent smoke spiraling 5,000 feet in the air. Fighters strafed the island's rail and road system and destroyed or damaged six locomotives and over 100 cars and other vehicles.

ALLIED CONTROL COMMISSION TO MEET IN BERLIN

PARIS, June 4.—The four-power Allied control commission, which will decide how Germany is to be occupied, was expected to hold its first meeting today in or near Berlin.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was understood to have left his Frankfurt headquarters yesterday for Berlin to join Field Marshal Sir Bernard L. Montgomery and Marshal Gregory Zhukov, the British and Russian representatives on the commission. Maj. Gen. Jean de Lattre de Tassigny was the likeliest French representative, although some quarters thought Lt. Gen. Joseph-Pierre Koenig, military governor of Paris, might be on the commission.

Radio Luxembourg quoted Russian reports that Potsdam, a Berlin suburb, would be the seat of the commission.

American correspondents chosen to cover the historic meeting left here by plane for Frankfurt yesterday, and it was understood they would arrive in Berlin today. They were Joseph W. Grigg, Jr., of United Press, representative news agencies; Drew Middleton, N. Y. Times, for newspapers; and Roy Porter for radio networks.

Government Spending To Taper Off

pration in the next fiscal year. The house appropriations committee last week whacked nearly $112,000,000 from an appropriation bill to supply 19 war agencies. The cost still is large, $770,000,000.

But in recommending the appropriations to the house the committee warned all concerned that there would be greater cuts next year and ultimate abolition of the various war babies at the earliest possible moment.

Hard To Figure

The fiscal year system makes it somewhat difficult to understand how the government makes its spending and revenue estimates. The current 1945 fiscal year budget was proposed to Congress almost 18 months ago in January, 1944. The budget for the 1946 fiscal year, which begins this July 1, was proposed to Congress by Mr. Roosevelt last January.

During the 12 months beginning July 1 the government will operate on a budget proposed by Mr. Roosevelt. Next January Mr. Truman will present the 1947 fiscal year budget to Congress. The 1947 fiscal year will begin July 1, 1946.

Budgets To Be Smaller

The beginning of reconversion of industry from war to peace and the reduction in the size of the armed forces assure that Mr. Truman's first budget will be smaller than the last two Roosevelt budgets. The current fiscal year will be the record breaker for spending, and probably for receipts too. In the 1944 fiscal year the government spent $93,743,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt estimated last January that in the 1946 fiscal year we would spend $82,500,000,000. It is expected that the Truman administration will be able to keep costs below that figure by various economies. In the first 100 per cent Truman budget for the 1947 fiscal year spending may be expected to shrink many more billions of dollars.

NEWS OF OUR MEN and WOMEN IN UNIFORM

James Paul Turner, son of Mrs. Jennings Turner, Town street, wrote a letter to his mother recently. It was written on the stationery of the German Elite Guard of the Dusseldorf police district. He had been, he wrote, on a tour of inspection in the city. He described the city as a pile of rubble.

He had also been in Cologne, Coblenz, Barn and Aachen and some of the other cities of the Rhine and Ruhr. He wrote that they, too, had been leveled. He wrote that the people were thoroughly defeated and dazed. He thought that it would take at least one hundred years to rebuild Germany.

A cigarette is of more value in Dusseldorf than gold. The people, he wrote, just stand around and wait for a Yank to discard a cigarette so they can pick up the butt. He told that the people must live in cellars because there is not a standing home in the community. Turner is a former Daily Herald reporter.

Pfc. Raymond Haley, in a letter to Patrolman Elmer Merriman, inclosed a parking ticket which he had received for overtime parking on his last furlough at home. He also enclosed a nickel to pay the costs of the ticket.

Pfc. Haley is now stationed in England after being in Germany up to the capitulation of the Nazis. In England he has been attending a projectionist school from which he has now been graduated. He was not sure that he would get a furlough home very soon, but hoped to.

His address is Pfc. Raymond Haley, ASN 35297041, 114th General Hospital, APO 121-A, c/o Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

Donald L. Allen, a/s, Co. 75 Unit A-6 Brks, 113 USNT & Dist. Center, Camp Peary, Williamsburg, Va.

Weldon Penn Leist C/Y, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ottis Leist, Route 1, Circleville, is now serving aboard an Atlantic Fleet Destroyer Tender. Prior to his present assignment he was aboard a large destroyer. He has a brother who is a sergeant in the Army.

SOLDIERS LEARN TO SWIM BEFORE FIGHTING JAPS

WASHINGTON, June 4—Swimming, boxing and team sports are on the "must" list of U. S. soldiers transferring from Europe to the Pacific.

In aquatics the stroke taught will hark back to the days of the old swimming hole.

For the Army ground forces has decided every soldier must learn to swim for his own safety and combat efficiency. And though instructors will be qualified to teach advance strokes the real emphasis will be on the dog paddle, back scull, side stroke and elementary breast stroke.

They have been chosen because of a combination of these strokes would enable a soldier to stay afloat for the maximum length of time and because they would be most useful for swimming in clothing or with equipment.

The other "must" on the Army's physical training part of overall redeployment training is boxing. The Army believes this will not only improve soldiers' stamina and their ability to defend themselves but will whet their combative spirit and increase their confidence.

In addition each soldier will be expected to participate in one team sport to provide additional physical conditioning and to inculcate team spirit. Training will be in the fundamentals, while competitive sports will be organized in spare time.

NEWS OF OUR MEN and WOMEN IN UNIFORM

James Paul Turner, son of Mrs. Jennings Turner, Town street, wrote a letter to his mother recently. It was written on the stationery of the German Elite Guard of the Dusseldorf police district. He had been, he wrote, on a tour of inspection in the city. He described the city as a pile of rubble.

He had also been in Cologne, Coblenz, Barn and Aachen and some of the other cities of the Rhine and Ruhr. He wrote that they, too, had been leveled. He wrote that the people were thoroughly defeated and dazed. He thought that it would take at least one hundred years to rebuild Germany.

A cigarette is of more value in Dusseldorf than gold. The people, he wrote, just stand around and wait for a Yank to discard a cigarette so they can pick up the butt. He told that the people must live in cellars because there is not a standing home in the community. Turner is a former Daily Herald reporter.

Nell A. Leist, Yeoman Leist is a graduate of Pickaway township high school. Before entering the Navy he was an accountant for the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric company. He wears the American and European-African-Middle-Eastern campaign ribbons.

SOLDIERS LEARN TO SWIM BEFORE FIGHTING JAPS

WASHINGTON, June 4—Swimming, boxing and team sports are on the "must" list of U. S. soldiers transferring from Europe to the Pacific.

In aquatics the stroke taught will hark back to the days of the old swimming hole.

For the Army ground forces has decided every soldier must learn to swim for his own safety and combat efficiency. And though instructors will be qualified to teach advance strokes the real emphasis will be on the dog paddle, back scull, side stroke and elementary breast stroke.

They have been chosen because of a combination of these strokes would enable a soldier to stay afloat for the maximum length of time and because they would be most useful for swimming in clothing or with equipment.

The other "must" on the Army's physical training part of overall redeployment training is boxing. The Army believes this will not only improve soldiers' stamina and their ability to defend themselves but will whet their combative spirit and increase their confidence.

In addition each soldier will be expected to participate in one team sport to provide additional physical conditioning and to incalculable team spirit. Training will be in the fundamentals, while competitive sports will be organized in spare time.

'Haw Haw' Seized

WILLIAM JOYCE, the "Lord Haw Haw" of Nazi propaganda, has been seized by the Allied forces. Joyce, born in New York City in 1906 and a graduate of London university in 1927, went to Germany a month before the outbreak of the war. All during the war he was Goebbels' No. 1 propagandist to Britain, broadcasting with his familiar "Jairmany calling." Last week Norman Baile Stewart, who called himself the original "Lord Haw Haw," was seized in Austria.

MRS. TRUMAN RETURNS HOME; GOES TO WORK

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., June 4—Mrs. Harry S. Truman, who "always loved keeping house," was tidying up the nation's Summer white house today.

Back in her home town for the first time since her husband became President of the United States, Bess Wallace Truman went busily to work getting things in shape—even if the painters weren't through.

Rain has held up the painting project, which is expected to take two more weeks.

Mrs. Truman, daughter Mary Margaret and the first lady's mother, Mrs. D. W. Wallace, returned aboard a special railroad car from Washington last night for a vacation.

THE SUICIDE WAR

PERHAPS there is more than meets the eye, in those Japanese "suicidal attacks" that are so prevalent lately. From this distance, which gives a perspective of the whole picture, the term seems symbolic. While the Jap fighters in their reckless offensive policy are blindly destroying themselves, their proud empire is doing likewise. Surely never in modern times has there been such a clear and obvious case of national self-destruction.

Perhaps the Japanese, both leaders and followers, have really believed they could win the war. Perhaps they still believe it, in spite of their fatal losses and our steadily growing power. Practical and forthright Americans cannot understand the mental operations of that strange race. They may not even understand themselves. They seem driven not by logic, but by a fatal doom. We ourselves are a part of that solemn fate. We are forced to destroy them, whether we want to or not. And so the tragic drama moves ever more swiftly to its close.

CHANGING BACK

THE War Production Board seems wise in deciding to let business management handle the reconversion of industry, rather than to do it by direct government control. It is really industry's job, anyway. A shrewd statement along this line is made by Chairman J. A. Krug of the production board, when he says:

"The danger confronting us is, as I see it, that we will overlook the natural resilience of the economy, the capacity of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers to adapt themselves to changed conditions and hence quickly to utilize the resources released from munitions production. If we were to attempt in Washington to see that every manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer got his exact share of relaxed man power and materials, we would be lost in a myriad of rules and regulations. We would get in the way of reconversion, rather than speed it."

All in all, government and business have got along surprisingly well in these difficult war times by a mutual spirit of give and take, flavored with a reasonable amount of patriotism.

NEW CARS

HOW many cars are 200,000, the number reported as likely to be manufactured this year? A chilling answer is furnished by a motor company: about seven per dealer. To make it harder, many of the 200,000 will not become available until next year.

Figure it out for yourself: what are your chances of getting a new car? Correct! then be sure that you are doing all you can to keep the old bus in shape.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 4—We can kid ourselves about the peace in San Francisco but this would merit no advantage.

State Secretary Stettinius told the truth about it in his speech, although the most important facts were submerged in headlines and accounts.

From what I hear among people, particularly returning soldiers, there is a feeling of distrust at the negotiations and results. It seems to be a broad sentiment taking expression, strangely enough, in criticism of England and her stand, more than of Russia.

This feeling is current among people who do not understand the ins and outs of the matter, and I think it is dangerous, because England is going our way, no matter how much she may chisel on the side, while Russia is proceeding in an opposite direction—and steadfastly. Here are the facts of the matter:

The greatest accomplishment of State Secretary Stettinius in San Francisco is the alignment of so-called republics on this hemisphere behind the American policy of democracy and freedom. For this accomplishment alone, in my opinion, Mr. Stettinius has earned the right to be considered a great secretary of state.

I know most of the stories of his deficiencies, and I have reason to believe his removal is planned by sincere devotees of the Truman administration who believe he does not carry enough weight for the times. Who does?

If you can name anyone, whose acumen and experience measures up to the demands of this critically historical era, you probably could get him appointed. I do not know any such.

Mr. Stettinius dragged in Argentina to our sphere of influence, and he promoted a secondary, but most important theme, at San Francisco to the Dumbarton Oaks formula—namely the theory of hemisphere defense priorities and cooperation.

In short he lined up the South American republics behind our spirit, and as long as we can keep them there and away from Russia we will have accomplished the utmost possible in promotion of our way of life. This is the achievement of Mr. Stettinius which has gone underestimated.

The defects of his scheme for peace are plain, and as a matter of fact they are apparent in Mr. Stettinius' own frank analysis. We have the big five voting on peace-keeping, each reserving the right to veto any important decision.

Thus France and China, who have no arms, are able, by a combination of their votes to control the big three, who have the power to keep the peace. Thus the responsibility is dispersed while the authority is not shared.

Stalin already is campaigning through French communists to get control of the French government. The Communists' army in China is ambitious. If these ambitions of the Soviets succeed, Russia, France and China could outnumber the defendants of democracy on the peace-keeping council, and rule the world.

To prevent this, the powers have reserved an obnoxious veto arrangement whereby they can stop any action of the council. But this too applies to France and China, who are submissive in the present

Control of Throat Bleeding

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FOLLOWING removal of the tonsils, excessive bleeding may occur. As a general rule, this bleeding is not serious. Excessive bleeding may occur within 24 hours after the tonsils have been removed, and this is due to the fact that all the bleeding had not been completely checked during the operation, or due to relaxation of the walls of the blood vessels, or perhaps to violent coughing or vomiting.

Another type of bleeding, called secondary hemorrhage, may take place from 3 to 14 days after removal of the tonsils. This kind of bleeding is said to be the result of a number of different causes. It may be due to injury to the blood vessel walls, to vitamin "C" deficiency, to emotional strain, to exertion or to the eating of rough foods. Also infections of the tissues in the throat where the tonsils have been removed often seem to be the leading cause for secondary hemorrhage. It is not possible to predict in all instances just which patients may develop secondary hemorrhage.

Controlling Hemorrhage There are many methods employed for controlling secondary hemorrhage or bleeding. These include an injection of blood into a vein, injection into an area where the bleeding is occurring with a mixture of a local anesthetic and epinephrine which tends to contract the blood vessels. Since the throat tissues from which the bleeding is coming are not firm, it is often difficult to sew the tissues to check the bleeding.

Often, gently removing the blood clot and applying pressure is sufficient to control the bleeding, or the bleeding point may be treated with a solution of silver nitrate.

According to Doctor Francis Henry McGovern of Danville, Virginia, the use of the chewing gum containing sulfathiazole after removal of the tonsils, seems to have lessened the number of cases of secondary hemorrhage.

Gum Pleasant

It would appear that the gum is pleasant, practical and simple to use. No reactions have been noted from its use. The patients chew a piece of gum from one-half to one hour, four to six times a day. It seems that the chewing keeps the muscles limber, lessens the difficulty in swallowing and hastens the healing. It is best for the patient to lie down with the head lower than the shoulders when the gum is chewed. This will allow the sulfathiazole to reach the tonsils or area in the back of the throat.

It would appear that this method of treatment following removal of the tonsils may help in avoiding complications.

SYNOPSIS

TERRY ARNOLD, a young Vermont newspaperman, has written a fairly successful novel. To gather material for a second book she has gone to the Argentine, her subject matter to be the wealthy playboy set of that Latin-American country.

Other characters are:
BROOKS KIMBERLY, owner of Ultimo Ventura, a race horse;
CORINNE ARTIGAS, Kimberly's fiancée, and
RAFF CORDOBA, architect and friend of Kimberly.

YESTERDAY: Terry gets her first glimpse of Argentine high society at a celebration over the victory of a race horse (on which she had won a considerable sum) given by the horse's owner, Brooks Kimberly. She visits Raff Cordoba's luxurious penthouse apartment and gains an invitation to visit at Kimberly's fabulous Norman castle.

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE SUN was high and brilliant when Terry opened her sleep-laden eyes. She yawned, gazed around her ultra-feminine boudoir. Well, it hadn't vanished while she slept last night, either. She saw her evening slippers then, and her silken slip dangling from a chair. She tucked slim arms beneath her head and tried to keep her excitement down.

It wasn't true—last night—she told herself sternly. She had eaten alone in the dining room, and had a glass of champagne, and dreamed she met all those delectable characters! Raff was a dream. . . . Brooks Kimberly and Corinne and Corinne's charming father, editor and owner of Buenos Aires' most influential paper. . . . and Jim, Brooks' mother, and the baroness! It wasn't true that Jim had actually insisted she come out to the estancia!

This morning the celebration was over. If they remembered the North American stranger, they would be regretting the hasty invitation. She couldn't go through with it, even if they did feel obligated to mention it again.

A sharp knock brought her up like a shot. She gathered her robe about her and hurried to the door. The bellboy handed in a box and disappeared.

She tore off the tissue with fingers that trembled. Inside a glassine box were a dozen long stemmed yellow roses. She searched anxiously for the card. In it was scrawled, "Thank you for a heavenly evening. Raff."

"Positively old world gallantry," murmured Terry, but her heart was pounding. Maybe they wouldn't drop her! She raced through her shower and into her best slacks suit. After all, they had had a wonderful time last night. Raff, with his effervescent gaiety; Brooks and Corinne, with their quieter, sophisticated zest. They had been interested and amused at her Norte Americanisms, her reporter slang. Well, she would do her damndest to amuse them if only they'd give her a glimpse of that famous estancia life.

Her wave of hope lapsed, however, as she finished her dressing and still no further message. The flowers were probably a courteous goodbye. It was past 11. Surely they would have called before this. She broke off one of the roses and pinned it recklessly in her hair, then found a crystal vase for the others. She was filling it with water from the bathroom tap when the knock came on the door. She went back into the sitting room with the vase, calling, "Come in."

The door opened. Raff, looking sleepy and almost too handsome in a gray suit of rough tweeds, lounged there. One lock of blond curly hair fell over his forehead, emphasizing the impudent, apprehensive look on his face.

"I have heard that in North America," he said, "a gentleman can stop by at a lady's room on his way to breakfast without risking death or disgrace. I wanted to see for myself."

"You are incorrigible," Terry laughed, "but you're forgiven because of the roses."

Raff came in and shut the door. "I'm glad you liked them," he said. "I said to myself this morning as I was picking them—"

"Then it was YOU who brought them up," Terry murmured in mock distress. "I'm so sorry I was half asleep, and thought it was a bell-boy!"

"Did I have a red uniform with shiny brass buttons?"

"That's right."

"That was me." He took one of Terry's hands in his and flexed her fingers as he grinned down at her. In North America, after a gentleman sends a lady flowers, he may kiss her, yes?"

Terry pulled her hand away with a laugh. "No! He either takes her along to breakfast with him or leaves."

"Breakfast is taken for granted and incidental," Raff protested. "What I came for was to make certain you were packed. Then, while we eat, they can be taking your luggage to the plane. We leave, Brooks and you and I, in one hour for the Kimberly estancia."

"No!" It was an exclamation of delighted disbelief on Terry's part, but Raff looked anxious. "And I came personally so that you would not disappoint us and break your promise to come."

Terry said breathlessly, her eyes shining, "Don't worry. I'll be there!"

IT IS NOT necessary to have any high card strength at all in your hand in order to possess the requirements for a sound raise of your partner's suit. If you have a satisfactory number of trumps to make his suit safe, and enough shortage of some other suit to furnish ruffing tricks, you may have much better support for him than if you had a goodly number of honors in an evenly balanced hand.

After he had made his free raise of clubs on the first round, over East's heart bid, he decided he never should have done that, because his hand lacked high card strength. Consequently, although his partner made an extremely strong bid on his second turn, in cue-bidding the opponents' hearts, he feared his first bid might cause his partner to over-value South's high card strength, and so passed instead of bidding 5-Clubs as he should. After West's 4-Hearts got doubled by North, South most emphatically should have taken out into 5-Clubs, especially with his lack of defensive strength.

Against the 4-Hearts doubled, South led a club. It is easy to see how East got set on clubs. With South's fine fit and short diamonds, 5-Clubs would have been a cinch, losing a trick in each major.

Trumans Popular Because White House Invitation Cards Making Appearance
They Remain Just Trumans

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—For heaven's sake, you aren't going to talk about the Trumans again, are you?
Me (replying): I am. I certainly am!
One of the 789 reasons the Trumans are so satisfactory is that they are being "Trumans." They are not trying to be "Roosevelts." Nobody could ever be a "Roosevelt" except a "Roosevelt." The "Trumans" are smart. They know this. They do not pretend to follow Roosevelt precedents. They are blithely engaged in making Truman precedents. And having a wonderful time meanwhile.

By virtue of muscle, fast running and shrewd maneuvering for place, I got a spot in the front row at one of Mr. Truman's most recent conferences. From this coveted anchorage, I brazenly asked the president, in that few minutes of informality before the formal conference started: "I don't suppose, Mr. President, that the trip you made to the bank today had anything to do with payday."

It is not proper to quote the president of the United States directly. But I may say that Mr. Truman's reply was definitely to the effect that it WAS time to go to the bank. He had had one payday.

IT HAS BEEN MANY A MONTH since invitations embossed in cold letters "THE WHITE HOUSE" were delivered at anybody's door.

I had almost forgotten what the gold seal looked like on white cards until yesterday when Mrs. Truman announced he would be "At Home on Tuesday afternoon, May 29, 1945." This particular gold seal was not the Great Seal of the United States. It was the Presidential seal. Used by the presidential family for stationery. The presidential seal closely resembles the Great Seal—the one embedded in the floor of the White House entrance. Both seals have the same spread eagle, holding in one claw an olive branch and in the other a quiver of arrows, "denoting the power of peace and war."

Above the head of the eagle is the legend "E PLURIBUS UNUM" meaning "ONE OUT OF MANY." And above the legend is the Constellation of 13 Stars for the historic first 13 states. (The seal was adopted in 1782.)

Now I will take you on my patriotic tour back to Mrs. Truman's invitation. As is the custom on all formal invitations to the Executive Mansion a card of admission was enclosed. The card said: "East Entrance. Please present this card at THE WHITE HOUSE . . . NOT TRANSFERABLE."

Got out my magnifying glass to study the gold tracery at the back of the card of admission. When such cards were plentiful, I did not notice the tracery. But now, let me see! Why it's a faint sketch of the south entrance to the White House.

And there are the graceful columns and the portico where Franklin Roosevelt stood that snowy January day when he took his last oath of office as president of the United States and made his last public appearance.

Surely that gold tracery was not on any of the pre-war cards of admission. Adrian B. Tolley (administrative officer of social entertainment is his official title) would know. Mr. Tolley did know.

The gold tracery of the White House is something new. It was a security measure. Done so that the card could not be counterfeited by people who should not be admitted to the White House.

Who had prepared the sketch? It was made from an engraving done at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving by one of the most skilled craftsmen. Had I noticed that the letters on the "Admit Cards" were engraved? Well, this was the first time that had been done for a long time.

"We wanted to make the card as dignified and beautiful as possible," said Tolley, with pride. "The White House cards should be beautiful because they come from the White House and because many people like to keep them as souvenirs of historic interest. We all worked on this new one for Mr. Truman to get it the best we possibly could."

THE SUICIDE WAR

PERHAPS there is more than meets the eye, in those Japanese "suicidal attacks" that are so prevalent lately. From this distance, which gives a perspective of the whole picture, the term seems symbolic. While the Jap fighters in their reckless offensive policy are blindly destroying themselves, their proud empire is doing likewise. Surely never in modern times has there been such a clear and obvious case of national self-destruction.

Perhaps the Japanese, both leaders and followers, have really believed they could win the war. Perhaps they still believe it, in spite of their fatal losses and our steadily growing power. Practical and forthright Americans cannot understand the mental operations of that strange race. They may not even understand themselves. They seem driven not by logic, but by a fatal doom. We ourselves are a part of that solemn fate. We are forced to destroy them, whether we want to or not. And so the tragic drama moves ever more swiftly to its close.

CHANGING BACK

THE War Production Board seems wise in deciding to let business management handle the reconversion of industry, rather than to do it by direct government control. It is really industry's job, anyway. A shrewd statement along this line is made by Chairman J. A. Krug of the production board, when he says:

"The danger confronting us is, as I see it, that we will overlook the natural resilience of the economy, the capacity of manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers to adapt themselves to changed conditions and hence quickly to utilize the resources released from munitions production. If we were to attempt in Washington to see that every manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer got his exact share of relaxed man power and materials, we would be lost in a myriad of rules and regulations. We would get in the way of reconversion, rather than speed it."

All in all, government and business have got along surprisingly well in these difficult war times by a mutual spirit of give and take, flavored with a reasonable amount of patriotism.

NEW CARS

HOW many cars are 200,000, the number reported as likely to be manufactured this year? A chilling answer is furnished by a motor company: about seven per dealer. To make it harder, many of the 200,000 will not become available until next year.

Figure it out for yourself: what are your chances of getting a new car? Correct! then be sure that you are doing all you can to keep the old bus in shape.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MAILLON

WASHINGTON, June 4—We can kid ourselves about the peace in San Francisco but this would merit no advantage. State Secretary Stettinius told the truth about it in his speech, although the most important facts were submerged in headlines and accounts.

From what I hear among people, particularly returning soldiers, there is a feeling of distrust at the negotiations and results. It seems to be a broad sentiment taking expression, strangely enough, in criticism of England and her stand, more than of Russia.

This feeling is current among people who do not understand the ins and outs of the matter, and I think it is dangerous, because England is going our way, no matter how much she may chisel on the side, while Russia is proceeding in an opposite direction—and steadfastly. Here are the facts of the matter:

The greatest accomplishment of State Secretary Stettinius in San Francisco is the alignment of so-called republics on this hemisphere behind the American policy of democracy and freedom. For this accomplishment alone, in my opinion, Mr. Stettinius has earned the right to be considered a great secretary of state.

I know most of the stories of his deficiencies, and I have reason to believe his removal is planned by sincere devotees of the Truman administration who believe he does not carry enough weight for the times. Who does?

If you can name anyone, whose acumen and experience measures up to the demands of this critically historical era, you probably could get him appointed. I do not know any such.

Mr. Stettinius dragged in Argentina to our sphere of influence, and he promoted a secondary, but most important theme, at San Francisco to the Dumbarton Oaks formula—namely the theory of hemisphere defense priorities and cooperation.

In short he lined up the South American republics behind our spirit, and as long as we can keep them there and away from Russia we will have accomplished the utmost possible in promotion of our way of life. This is the achievement of Mr. Stettinius which has gone underestimated.

The defects of his scheme for peace are plain, and as a matter of fact they are apparent in Mr. Stettinius' own frank analysis. We have the big five voting on peace-keeping, each reserving the right to veto any important decision.

Thus France and China, who have no arms, are able, by a combination of their votes to control the big three, who have the power to keep the peace. Thus the responsibility is dispersed while the authority is not shared.

Stalin already is campaigning through French communists to get control of the French government. The Communists' army in China is ambitious. If these ambitions of the Soviets succeed, Russia, France and China could outnumber the defendants of democracy on the peace-keeping council, and rule the world.

To prevent this, the powers have reserved an obnoxious veto arrangement whereby they can stop any action of the council. But this too applies to France and China, who are submissive in the present

Control of Throat Bleeding

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FOLLOWING removal of the tonsils, excessive bleeding may occur. As a general rule, this bleeding is not serious. Excessive bleeding may occur within 24 hours after the tonsils have been removed, and this is due to the fact that all the bleeding had not been completely checked during the operation, or due to relaxation of the walls of the blood vessels, or perhaps to violent coughing or vomiting.

Another type of bleeding, called secondary hemorrhage, may take place from 3 to 14 days after removal of the tonsils. This kind of bleeding is said to be the result of a number of different causes. It may be due to injury to the blood vessel walls, to vitamin "C" deficiency, to emotional strain, to exertion or to the eating of rough foods. Also infections of the tissues in the throat where the tonsils have been removed often serve as the leading cause for secondary hemorrhage. It is not possible to predict in all instances just which patients may develop secondary hemorrhage.

Controlling Hemorrhage
There are many methods employed for controlling secondary hemorrhage or bleeding. These include an injection of blood into a vein, injection into an area where the bleeding is occurring with a mixture of a local anesthetic and epinephrine which tends to contract the blood vessels. Since the throat tissues from which the bleeding is coming are not firm, it is often difficult to sew the tissues to check the bleeding.

Often, gently removing the blood clot and applying pressure is sufficient to control the bleeding, or the bleeding point may be treated with a solution of silver nitrate.

According to Doctor Francis Henry McGovern of Danville, Virginia, the use of the chewing gum containing sulfathiazole after removal of the tonsils, seems to have lessened the number of cases of secondary hemorrhage.

Gum Pleasant
It would appear that the gum is pleasant, practical and simple to use. No reactions have been noted from its use. The patients chew a piece of gum from one-half to one hour, four to six times a day. It seems that the chewing keeps the muscles limber, lessens the difficulty in swallowing and hastens the healing. It is best for the patient to lie down with the head lower than the shoulders when the gum is chewed. This will allow the sulfathiazole to reach the tonsils or area in the back of the throat.

It would appear that this method of treatment following removal of the tonsils may help in avoiding complications.

SYNOPSIS

TERRY ARNOLD, a young Vermont newspaperman, has written a fairly successful novel. To rather material for a second book she has gone to the Argentine, her subject matter to be the wealthy playboy set of that Latin-American country.

Other characters are:
BROOKS KIMBERLY, owner of Ultimo Ventura, a race horse;
CORINNE ARTIGAS, Kimberly's fiancée, and
RAFF CORDOBA, architect and friend of Kimberly.

YESTERDAY: Terry gets her first glimpse of Argentine high society at a celebration over the victory of a race horse (on which she had won a considerable sum) given by the horse's owner, Brooks Kimberly. She visits Raff Cordoba's luxurious penthouse apartment and gains an invitation to visit at Kimberly's fabulous Norman castle.

CHAPTER SEVEN

THE SUN was high and brilliant when Terry opened her sleep-laden eyes. She yawned, gazed around her ultra-feminine boudoir. Well, it hadn't vanished while she slept last night, either. She saw her evening slippers then, and her silken slip dangling from a chair. She tucked slim arms beneath her head and tried to keep her excitement down. It wasn't true—last night—she told herself sternly. She had eaten alone in the dining room, and had a glass of champagne, and dreamed she met all those delectable characters! Raff was a dream . . . Brooks Kimberly and Corinne and Corinne's charming father, editor and owner of Buenos Aires' most influential paper . . . and Jim, Brooks' mother, and the barones! It wasn't true that Jim had actually insisted she come out to the estancia!

This morning the celebration was over. If they remembered the North American stranger, they would be regretting the hasty invitation. She couldn't go through with it, even if they did feel obligated to mention it again.

A sharp knock brought her up like a shot. She gathered her robe about her and hurried to the door. The bellboy handed in a box and disappeared.

She tore off the tissue with fingers that trembled. Inside a glassine box were a dozen long stemmed yellow roses. She searched anxiously for the card. In it was scrawled, "Thank you for a heavenly evening, Raff."

"Positively old world gallantry," murmured Terry, but her heart was pounding. Maybe they wouldn't drop her! She reached through her shower and into her best slacks suit. After all, they had had a wonderful time last night. Raff, with his effervescent gaiety; Brooks and Corinne, with their quieter, sophisticated zest. They had been interested and amused at her North Americanisms, her reporter slang. Well, she would do her damndest to amuse them if only they'd give her a glimpse of that famous estancia life.

Her wave of hope lapsed, however, as she finished her dressing and still no further message. The flowers were probably a courteous goodbye. It was past 11. Surely they would have called before this. She broke off one of the roses and pinned it recklessly in her hair, then found a crystal vase for the others. She was filling it with water from the bathroom tap when the knock came on the door. She went back into the sitting room with the vase, calling, "Come in."

The door opened. Raff, looking sleepy and almost too handsome in a gray suit of rough tweeds, lounged there. One lock of blond curly hair fell over his forehead, emphasizing the impudent, apprehensive look on his face.

"I have heard that in North America," he said, "a gentleman can stop by at a lady's room on his way to breakfast without risking death or disgrace. I wanted to see for myself."

"You are incorrigible," Terry laughed, "but you're forgiven because of the roses."

Raff came in and shut the door. "I'm glad you liked them," he said. "I said to myself this morning as I was picking them—"

"Then it was YOU who brought them up," Terry mourned in mock distress. "I'm so sorry I was half asleep, and thought it was a bell-boy!"

"Did I have a red uniform with shiny brass buttons?"

"That's right."

"That was me." He took one of Terry's hands in his and flexed her fingers as he grinned down at her. "In North America, after a gentleman sends a lady flowers, he may kiss her, yes?"

Terry pulled her hand away with a laugh. "No! He either takes her along to breakfast with him or leaves."

"Breakfast is taken for granted and incidental," Raff protested. "What I came for was to make certain you were packed. Then, while we eat, they can be taking your luggage to the plane. We leave, Brooks and you and I, in one hour for the Kimberly estancia."

"No!" It was an exclamation of delighted unbelief on Terry's part, but Raff looked anxious. "And I came personally so that you would not disappoint us and break your promise to come."

Terry said breathlessly, her eyes shining, "Don't worry. I'll be there!"

Order my breakfast for me, will you?"

Fifteen minutes later, packed and checked out, she joined Raff and Brooks at the breakfast table. Brooks, also in tweeds, greeted her with a friendly smile. He was sorry Corinne wasn't coming out with them this morning, but she had a meeting.

"She's the captain of Brooks' political career," Raff grinned. "It's a pity some people have to take life so seriously."

Brooks laughed, really laughed, and Terry looked at him a little startled. It was the first time she had heard him laugh aloud. The sound had a humorous, boyish ring. He grinned at Raff fondly.

"If everyone took life as seriously as you do," he ribbed, "the progress of civilization would certainly stumble." He winked at Terry. "We keep him for comedy relief."

They drove into the airport grounds, where an unbroken line of planes rested like a weary flock of giant birds on the shining runways. Raff nodded toward a silver plane with scarlet wing tips already poised on a runway. Its spinning propeller a polished disk in the sunlight. "There's Brooks' plane. We phoned ahead and had her warmed up."

As they climbed out of the car, smiling, dark-skinned boys in khaki uniforms took charge of their luggage, running ahead of them across the field to the waiting plane.

The plane door opened and a pink checked youth jumped out, shouting above the noise of the powerful engine, "She's all set, Senor Kimberly! I filled her with gas and oil and gave her a thorough check."

Brooks knocked out his pipe on the heel of his shoe.

"Thanks, Manolo. See you next trip."

Raff helped Terry into her seat and then followed her. Brooks was at the controls. They strapped their safety belts ready for the takeoff.

The engine roared as Brooks opened the throttle and started taxiing down the runway. "It's a perfect day for flying," he shouted back over his shoulder to Terry. "You'll get to see our pampas at their best."

Suddenly the plane whirled about as Brooks pointed its nose into the wind. It slid down the runway at full throttle and then lifted easily above a pattern of brown plowed fields and silver strips of highway running straight as arrows in flight across the sea of pampas.

Terry took a deep, satisfied breath and settled back in her seat. (To Be Continued)

HEARINGS ON PEACETIME WAR TRAINING OPEN
WASHINGTON, June 4—Long delayed hearings on compulsory peacetime military training got under way today before the house postwar military policy committee.

First witness on the proposal that is expected to explode into one of the hottest fights of this session of congress was Acting Secretary of State Joseph C. Grew. He was called to open the case for peacetime conscription.

The postwar policy committee and the house military affairs committee scheduled hearings on the subject of a peacetime training program several times in the past year but in each case there was a postponement.

The last postponement was in April when the postwar committee called off its previously announced plans to start hearings, reportedly at the request of the state department.

The state department was said to have asked a delay on the grounds that it would be bad for

EISENHART PACES TARS TO FIRST TRACK TITLE

GREAT LAKES, ILL., June 4—Great Lakes, a leading power in baseball, basketball and football during two world wars, today held its first major track and field title.

The Sailors, led by the tireless running of Les Eisenhart, won the 20th annual central collegiate conference track and field title Saturday with 47 points. Purdue finished second with 30 points and Marquette third with 23.

Great Lakes won only two firsts, both of them scored by Eisenhart. A veteran of six years on the cinders, starting with Ohio State in 1940, Eisenhart won the half-mile and mile runs.

A congressional group to be talking about postwar military forces while delegates at the San Francisco conference discussed world peace.

Chairman Clifton A. Woodrum, D. Va., of the postwar military policy committee said hearings would continue for two weeks. He has arranged to hear more than three dozen witnesses during that period on both sides of the issue.

PORTLAND, Me.—Mrs. Eunice Dunn sought a divorce from her husband Joseph because she said he left her home 29 years ago, saying, "I'm going down street. See you later."

She hasn't seen him since.

MAZAR PITCHES NO HIT, NO RUN GAME FOR BIRDS

By United Press
Pete Mazar, 21-year-old southpaw, pitched a no-hit, no-run game yesterday to pace the second division Columbus American Association club in the first of two wins over the Kansas City Blues.

Mazar, who joined the Red Birds this Spring after playing with Al-lentown in the Inter-State league, issued two walks.

The Blues assisted in their own 4 to 0 defeat by piling up five errors. In the second game, Manager Charley Root pitched Columbus to a 7 to 4 victory.

At Indianapolis, the league-leading Indians split a pair with Minneapolis, the circuit's cellar team. Indianapolis walked away with the opener, 11 to 1, but the Millers re-couped with a 7 to 5 win in the second.

In other American Association games, St. Paul and Louisville came out even in a double bill. Two scheduled contests between Milwaukee and Toledo were postponed on account of wet grounds. St. Paul took the first, 7 to 5, and Louisville rallied for a 5 to 3 win in the nightcap.

Today's games: Milwaukee at Toledo (2), Kansas City at Columbus, Minneapolis at Indianapolis, and St. Paul at Louisville (2). All are night games.

The Woodmont Rod and Gun Club of Hancock, Md., has raised 33,000 wild turkeys in the past 48 years at a cost of $150,000.

HEARINGS ON PEACETIME WAR TRAINING OPEN

WASHINGTON, June 4—Long delayed hearings on compulsory peacetime military training got under way today before the house postwar military policy committee.

First witness on the proposal that is expected to explode into one of the hottest fights of this session of congress was Acting Secretary of State Joseph C. Grew. He was called to open the case for peacetime conscription.

The postwar policy committee and the house military affairs committee scheduled hearings on the subject of a peacetime training program several times in the past year but in each case there was a postponement.

The last postponement was in April when the postwar committee called off its previously announced plans to start hearings, reportedly at the request of the state department.

The state department was said to have asked a delay on the grounds that it would be bad for and that said decedent left no wife surviving him.

The prayer of said petition is for a sale of said premises (together with the interest of Leannah Moorehead therein) for the payment of the debts and charges aforesaid.

The persons first above mentioned will further take notice that they have been made parties defendant to said petition and that they are required to answer the same on or before the 10 day of July, A. D. 1945.

EISENHART PACES TARS TO FIRST TRACK TITLE

GREAT LAKES, ILL., June 4—Great Lakes, a leading power in baseball, basketball and football during two world wars, today held its first major track and field title.

The Sailors, led by the tireless running of Les Eisenhart, won the 20th annual central collegiate conference track and field title Saturday with 47 points. Purdue finished second with 30 points and Marquette third with 23.

Great Lakes won only two firsts, both of them scored by Eisenhart. A veteran of six years on the cinders, starting with Ohio State in 1940, Eisenhart won the half-mile and mile runs.

a congressional group to be talking about postwar military forces while delegates at the San Francisco conference discussed world peace.

Chairman Clifton A. Woodrum, D. Va., of the postwar military policy committee said hearings would continue for two weeks. He has arranged to hear more than three dozen witnesses during that period on both sides of the issue.

MAZAR PITCHES NO HIT, NO RUN GAME FOR BIRDS

By United Press

Pete Mazar, 21-year-old southpaw, pitched a no-hit, no-run game yesterday to pace the second division Columbus American Association club in the first of two wins over the Kansas City Blues.

Mazar, who joined the Red Birds this Spring after playing with Alhewtown in the Inter-State league, issued two walks.

The Blues assisted in their own 4 to 0 defeat by piling up five errors. In the second game, Manager Charley Root pitched Columbus to a 7 to 4 victory.

At Indianapolis, the league-leading Indians split a pair with Minneapolis, the circuit's cellar team. Indianapolis walked away with the opener, 11 to 1, but the Millers reacquainted with a 7 to 5 win in the second.

In other American Association games, St. Paul and Louisville came out even in a double bill. Two scheduled contests between Milwaukee and Toledo were postponed on account of wet grounds. St. Paul took the first, 7 to 5, and Louisville rallied for a 5 to 3 win in the nightcap.

Today's games: Milwaukee at Toledo (2), Kansas City at Columbus, Minneapolis at Indianapolis, and St. Paul at Louisville (2). All are night games.

The Woodmont Rod and Gun Club of Hancock, Md., has raised 33,000 wild turkeys in the past 45 years at a cost of $150,000.

MAJOR LEAGUE PENNANT RACES ARE WIDE OPEN.

Team With Winning Streak Can Win; Reds, Cards Cop Twin Bills

NEW YORK, June 4—Any team in either major league which can begin to win consistently on the road must be considered a pennant contender on the basis of unmistakable trends revealed today at the completion of the first stage of the races.

As the teams completed "looping the loops," playing every other team in the league on a home basis, it was evident that there isn't an outstanding road club in either circuit. Yet with a few scattered exceptions even the second division teams can manage to win fairly consistently at home.

RADIO NEWS NOTES

"America's Town Meeting" launches its Summer tour, with the June 7 broadcast from Columbus, O. The forum series, a pioneer in presenting both sides of controversial questions in debates staged by authorities, will spend four months on tour, returning to New York for the October 4 broadcast. Stops tentatively scheduled include Columbus, Buffalo, Des Moines, Denver, Minneapolis, Chicago, Chautauqua, Fort Wayne, Louisville, Memphis, Riverside, San Di-ago, Santa Barbara, Hollywood, Salt Lake City, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Because service men stationed at a Southern California naval base keep writing in to the "Date With Judy" program asking for more songs from Louise (Judy) Erickson, Writer Alleen Leslie is composing another original song which she will work into a forthcoming script. Louise recently warbled Miss Leslie's "Bobby Sox Blues" in her debut as a singer on the series in which she stars.

Clifton Webb, sophisticated man-of-the-world stage star who will appear June 14 in a "Suspense" mystery drama, also enjoys a reputation as one of the nation's best-dressed actors. "But you'd never guess it from some of the roles I've played," he told Producer William Spier. "In my first big picture 'Laura,' my introduction to the audience was in a bath tub, and on the stage one of my most successful plays was 'As Thousands Cheer'—where I did an impersonation of Mahatma Gandhi!"

Government Again Offers Insurance On Wheat To Farmers,

GROWERS MAY BE PROTECTED BY ALL-RISK PLAN

Program Gives Protection Against Adverse Weather And Other Dangers

All-risk insurance on wheat is again being offered to Pickaway county farmers. John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway county AAA board announced Monday. Federal crop insurance, first provided by Congress in 1938, was recently reviewed and is being offered to growers again.

This insurance is protection against loss in yield due to the natural or unavoidable hazards to growing wheat. The different hazards that might damage wheat would be fire, hail, drought, floods, winter kill, insects, wind damage, in fact any source from which damage might occur with the exception of pure carelessness on the part of the farmer in seeding or trying to care for his crop.

The all-risk principle of crop insurance is most important to the farmer because no matter how well he has prepared the seed bed or how well he has selected, tested or treated his seed he cannot combat adverse weather, insects and disease. His only protection against these risks is to buy crop insurance, Mr. Boggs stated.

Federal crop insurance follows mostly the time-honored principals of insurance, but there is one major difference. In ordinary insurance property is insured for so much money and the premium is paid in so much money but crop insurance assures the farmer a certain number of bushels of wheat for a premium of so many bushels of wheat and should a loss occur the indemnity is figured in wheat, the AAA chairman said.

The farmer can for convenience sake, receive his loss in money and the amount he will receive is determined by the market price of wheat at the time his claim is granted. Premiums are also handled under this same plan. This plan protects both the insurer and the insured as the premiums and losses are based upon the same values.

Crop insurance is a protection against loss in yield and not against low wheat prices. Trying to insure on a money basis caused trouble for private insurance companies as they lost heavily because prices went down and not so much because crops were poor. This plan also fits the premium cost of the farmer's income. If the premium rate were on dollars—say at one dollar a bushel—the insurance would be too expensive for farmers when wheat was worth 50 cents a bushel and too low for the insurance company when wheat was worth $1.50 per bushel. This is why wheat crop insurance is on a bushel basis.

Crop insurance helps round out the national farm program. Soil conservation insures productivity, price supports insures fair prices and crop insurance insures yields. It all makes for more and better security for farmers and the communities in which they live, Mr. Boggs stated.

situation, as well as the big three. They can veto anything important.

Mr. Stettinius merely deceived us as to the emphasis of this fact in his speech; he did not exclude it. He said:

"In such an event the answer is simple. Another world war has come, vote or no vote and the world organization has failed," if any one vetoes anything.

This applies to all of the big five. He also has fallen short in maintaining our right to those Pacific islands. If we are to keep the peace we must have those complete.

Therefore you have no peace. You have a tentative and fargile arrangement. It can be abruptly terminated any time France or China, as well as the big three, enter a veto.

This is no peace at all. It is purely a stop-gap for the times. It is a provision for war by the only powers able to make it and France and China. It is apparent whatever final conclusion is arranged at San Francisco will not be able to overcome this anomaly which hopes for peace, but provides for war.

Yet the gravest defect at San Francisco is of the spirit. The man in the street knows, regardless of Mr. Stettinius and all his pious pronouncements, that the spirit of peace does not prevail there.

Good heavens, the fighting in Syria started while the peace conference was on. Our exclusion from Berlin was negotiated by Mr. Roosevelt at Yalta despite all our hopeful songs and theories that we were marching there. This condition has an effect on the people.

Russia is not following the Atlantic Charter by extending her hegemony through the Balkans in Europe. Her press and statesmen proclaim such an intention, but act adversely in Yugoslavia, France and elsewhere. How can anyone, therefore, feel that peace is achieved?

Our line of thought is being compromised under the theory that half a loaf is better than a whole. I do not think so. If we believe in something I think we should defend it. The time to defend it is now.

Our people want this, our soldiers fought for it. Why should we not get it? If we try to measure consequences against our ambitions we will fall into the slough with which we dealt unsuccessfully with Hitler. We will appease and postpone.

Whatever the consequences, our

STRIPES, BRASS FORGOTTEN BY ARMY BROTHERS

After duty hours in the Personnel Office at Lockbourne Army Air Base, stripes and brass lose their significance for Staff Sergeant T. M. Smith, clerk, and Major C. P. Smith, officer in charge, for they are brothers under the khaki.

Major Smith, personnel officer at Lockbourne since February of this year, is a veteran of 22 years in the Army. He has held every enlisted grade prior to receiving his commission in 1942, the year Sgt. Smith entered service.

The enlisted brother of the team finished a tour of duty overseas as a radio-gunner with the Eighth Air Force, and just arrived at Lockbourne last week from Moody Field, Georgia.

The brothers served together at that field too, in the same relative positions. They get along fine, and both consider being stationed together "just a lucky break".

WAR BOND SALES SLOW IN COUNTY

Only 17 Percent Of Quota Reached E Bonds Total $67,668.75 To Date

Pickaway county has reached 17 per cent of its E bond quota in the Seventh War Loan drive, the county war finance committee announced Monday.

Report of bond sales to June 1 show that county residents have purchased 1063 E bonds for $67,668.75. Sales of other issues amount to 48 per cent of the county quota. A total of 69 bonds have been purchased for $157,500.

Total sales in the drive amount to 1132 for $225,168.75.

These are sales actually cleared through the Federal Reserve bank.

Sales to corporations are not included since that portion of the drive does not officially open until June 16. A number of sales to corporations and organizations have already been made. The quota of such sales will not be released by counties until June 11.

Sales over the nation to date amount to about 40 per cent of the $7,000,000,000 assigned to individuals.

The Grand theatre will present a war bond premier Tuesday. Tickets for the show are being distributed by the war finance committee to purchasers of bonds in the current drive. To be shown will be the film "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "San Pietro."

Clark Will, chairman of the county campaign, Monday, called attention to the fact that several issues of bonds may be purchased.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS..

TOM: "It's mighty nice to receive a compliment like you've just given us, Judge. We do take our responsibilities very seriously and try to do the right thing with everybody. In spite of it, we get criticized now and then."

OLD JUDGE: "I know... you've got to take the bitter with the sweet in times like these. Speaking of criticism, and I mean really unfair criticism, reminds me of the spirit beverage business."

FRANK: "How is that, Judge?"

OLD JUDGE: "Simply this... can you think of any other business in which the seller is responsible for what the buyer does with his merchandise? If a person eats too much cake and gets indigestion, the baker isn't blamed. Nor is the coffee merchant criticized if someone drinks too much coffee and can't sleep. But the seller of spirit beverages gets blamed plenty if one of his customers overindulges. Doesn't seem quite fair, does it, Tom?"

TOM: "Frankly, it doesn't, Judge. We've never looked at it that way before."

Government Again Offers Insurance On Wheat To Farmers,

GROWERS MAY BE PROTECTED BY ALL-RISK PLAN

Program Gives Protection Against Adverse Weather And Other Dangers

All-risk insurance on wheat is again being offered to Pickaway county farmers. John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway county AAA board announced Monday. Federal crop insurance, first provided by Congress in 1933, was recently reviewed and is being offered to growers again.

This insurance is protection against loss in yield due to the natural or unavoidable hazards to growing wheat. The different hazards that might damage wheat would be fire, hail, drought, floods, winter kill, insects, wind damage, in fact any source from which damage might occur with the exception of pure carelessness on the part of the farmer in seeding or trying to care for his crop.

The all-risk principle of crop insurance is most important to the farmer because no matter how well he has prepared the seed bed or how well he has selected, tested or treated his seed he cannot combat adverse weather, insects and disease. His only protection against these risks is to buy crop insurance. Mr. Boggs stated.

Federal crop insurance follows mostly the time-honored principals of insurance, but there is one major difference. In ordinary insurance property is insured for so much money and the premium is paid in so much money but crop insurance assures the farmer a certain number of bushels of wheat for a premium of so many bushels of wheat and should a loss occur the indemnity is figured in wheat. The AAA chairman said.

The farmer can for convenience sake, receive his loss in money and the amount he will receive is determined by the market price of wheat at the time his claim is granted. Premiums are also handled under this same plan. This plan protects both the insurer and the insured as the premiums and losses are based upon the same values.

Crop insurance is a protection against loss in yield and not against loss in wheat prices. Trying to insure on a money basis caused trouble for private insurance companies as they lost heavily because prices went down and not so much because crops were poor. This plan also fits the premium cost of the farmer's income. If the premium rate were on dollars—say at one dollar a bushel—the insurance would be too expensive for farmers when wheat was worth 50 cents a bushel and too low for the insurance company when wheat was worth $1.50 per bushel. This is why wheat crop insurance is on a bushel basis.

Crop insurance helps round out the national farm program. Soil conservation insures productivity, price supports insures fair prices and crop insurance insures yields. It all makes for more and better security for farmers and the communities in which they live, Mr. Boggs stated.

situation, as well as the big three. They can veto anything important. Mr. Stettinius merely deceived us as to the emphasis of this fact in his speech; he did not exclude it. He said:

"In such an event the answer is simple. Another world war has come, vote or no vote and the world organization has failed," if any one vetoes anything. This applies to all of the big five. He also has fallen short in maintaining our right to those Pacific islands. If we are to keep the peace we must have those complete.

Therefore you have no peace. You have a tentative and fragile arrangement. It can be abruptly terminated any time France or China, as well as the big three, enter a veto.

This is no peace at all. It is purely a stop-gap for the times. It is a provision for war by the only powers able to make it and France and China. It is apparent whatever final conclusion is arranged at San Francisco will not be able to overcome this anomaly which hopes for peace, but provides for war.

Yet the gravest defect at San Francisco is of the spirit. The man in the street knows, regardless of Mr. Stettinius and all his

STRIPES, BRASS FORGOTTEN BY ARMY BROTHERS

After duty hours in the Personnel Office at Lockbourne Army Air Base, stripes and brass lose their significance for Staff Sergeant T. M. Smith, clerk, and Major C. P. Smith, officer in charge, for they are brothers under the khaki. Major Smith, personnel officer at Lockbourne since February of this year, is a veteran of 22 years in the Army. He has held every enlisted grade prior to receiving his commission in 1942, the year Sgt. Smith entered service.

The enlisted brother of the team finished a tour of duty overseas as a radio-gunner with the Eighth Air Force, and just arrived at Lockbourne last week from Moody Field, Georgia. The brothers served together at that field too, in the same relative positions. They get along fine, and both consider being stationed together "just a lucky break."

Our people want this, our soldiers fought for it. Why should we not get it? If we try to measure consequences against our ambitions we will fall into the slough with which we dealt unsuccessfully with Hitler. We will appease and postpone.

Whatever the consequences, our hopes are clear and we should not relax our earnestness for them. We cannot do more than lose—and we are doing that now.

Only 17 Percent Of Quota Reached E Bonds Total $67,668.75 To Date

Pickaway county has reached 17 per cent of its E bond quota in the Seventh War Loan drive, the county war finance committee announced Monday.

Report of bond sales to June 1 show that county residents have purchased 1063 E bonds for $67,668.75. Sales of other issues amount to 48 per cent of the county quota. A total of 69 bonds have been purchased for $157,500.

Total sales in the drive amount to $132 for $225,168.75.

These are sales actually cleared through the Federal Reserve bank.

Sales to corporations are not included since that portion of the drive does not officially open until June 16. A number of sales to corporations and organizations have already been made. The quota of such sales will not be released by counties until June 11.

Sales over the nation to date amount to about 40 per cent of the $7,000,000,000 assigned to individuals.

The Grand theatre will present a war bond premier Tuesday. Tickets for the show are being distributed by the war finance committee to purchasers of bonds in the current drive. To be shown will be the film "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "San Pietro."

Clark Will, chairman of the county campaign, Monday, called attention to the fact that several issues of bonds may be purchased.
